So, who are the stars of the autumn catwalk?

Amelanchier lamarckii (Valiant Poppy) is a beautiful, small tree that is attractive in all seasons. Star shaped flowers in March followed by coppery pink young leaves, dark red berries in July and during autumn yellowish green leaves turn scarlet and crimson.

Cercis canadensis (Ceylon Yellow)

'Forest Pansy' is a multi-stemmed tree with purple, heart-shaped leaves which turn a dramatic yellow in autumn.

Callicarpa bodinieri var. giraldii 'Profusion' (Ultra Violet) has the most astonishing berries in the whole of the plant world shining like clusters of amethysts

Winter Pansy, Autumn Crocus (Crocus Petal)

Autumn crocus look attractive planted with hardy cyclamen under an ornamental tree. Pansies look great planted in pots.

Pyracantha orange glow (Russet Orange) gives beautiful displays of orange berries in autumn and is useful trained across a wall or fence.

Malus Laura (Red Pear)

This a new crab-apple, which has white blossom in spring and medium sized deep red fruit.

Euonymus alatus (Pink Peacock) turns a spectacular shade of red/pink before the leaves fall.

Chrysanthemums (Mellow Rose & Limelight)

perfect for borders or tubs these will flower well into autumn and are excellent for cutting.

Sedums (Mellow Rose)

Their flat pink flowerheads are perfect for autumn and frosty mornings, they also look great in tubs.

Autumn and winter Patio Pots

Traditional autumn bedding plants are pansies, violas, primroses and polyanthus along with bellis and wallflowers.

If you want a consistent show then it's all about planting in combinations because traditional autumn bedding plants don't do much when it's very cold and wintry. You are really better off with evergreens that have the built-in antifreeze that flowers lack:

Gaultheria procumbens
Wintergreen is a naturally festive looking, neat, low-spreading evergreen with large red berries and reddish-tinged leaves in winter.

Euonymus, Pieris, variegated Ivies and hardy evergreen grasses can give a cheerful show whatever the weather and go on to complement your later plantings.

Carex are tuft-forming evergreen grasses with green, variegated or bronze, curly or arching leaves. Very tough and contemporary, they will look good all winter.

Remember to add some small bulbs like Snowdrops, Scillas, dwarf crocus and Narcissi, you should get flowers from the middle/end of Jan onwards.

Hellebores can also flower early, it depends on variety, Nigra will often start before Christmas.

One of the fastest growing trends in gardening is fruit growing. Trees laden with apples and pears will not only make your garden look delectable, they will also bring home-grown flavours into the kitchen. The most commonly planted fruit tree is the apple but you don't always have to follow convention. Pear, plum, cherry and fig trees also produce good results.

Autumn is a great time to plant trees, giving them ample time to establish a good root system for strong branches and lush foliage in the following growing season.
